WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Eureka Weather:

A weak front will move across the region today accompanied by light rain mainly north of Cape Mendocino. A Pacific front will bring more light rain Thursday afternoon to the north.

San Francisco Weather:

Persistent high pressure over the state will result in dry weather conditions and above average temperatures through the upcoming weekend.

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY

Sacramento Weather:

Dry and mild weather is expected through the week. Light showers may be possible over far northwest California today and Thursday.

Hanford Weather:

High pressure building over the forecast area will bring dry and mild conditions through the end of the week.

WEATHER

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

High pressure aloft and breezy offshore winds will bring warm and dry conditions into Thursday with chilly nights in wind sheltered areas. The afternoon temperatures will be well above normal on Wednesday and Thursday, then should gradually decline to seasonal normal by Sunday as the offshore flow decreases.

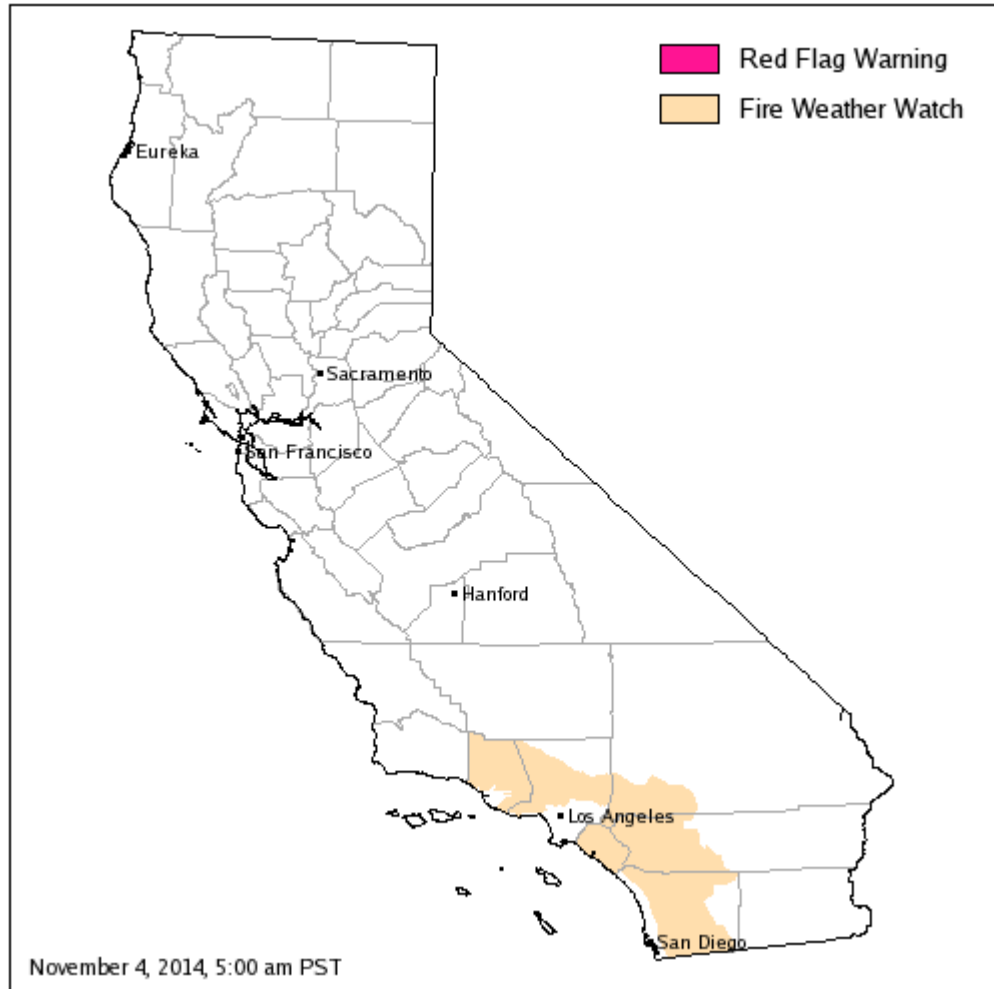

Extreme Southwestern California Including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

Surface high pressure over the Great Basin will bring periods of locally strong gusty northeast to east winds through Thursday morning near and along the coastal mountain slopes. Strengthening high pressure aloft will bring warming through Thursday. Winds will weaken for Friday and Saturday with slow cooling near the coast spreading slowly inland. Greater cooling and a return of night and morning coastal low clouds and fog is expected for early next week as a weak Pacific low pressure system moves toward California.

Southeast California Weather:

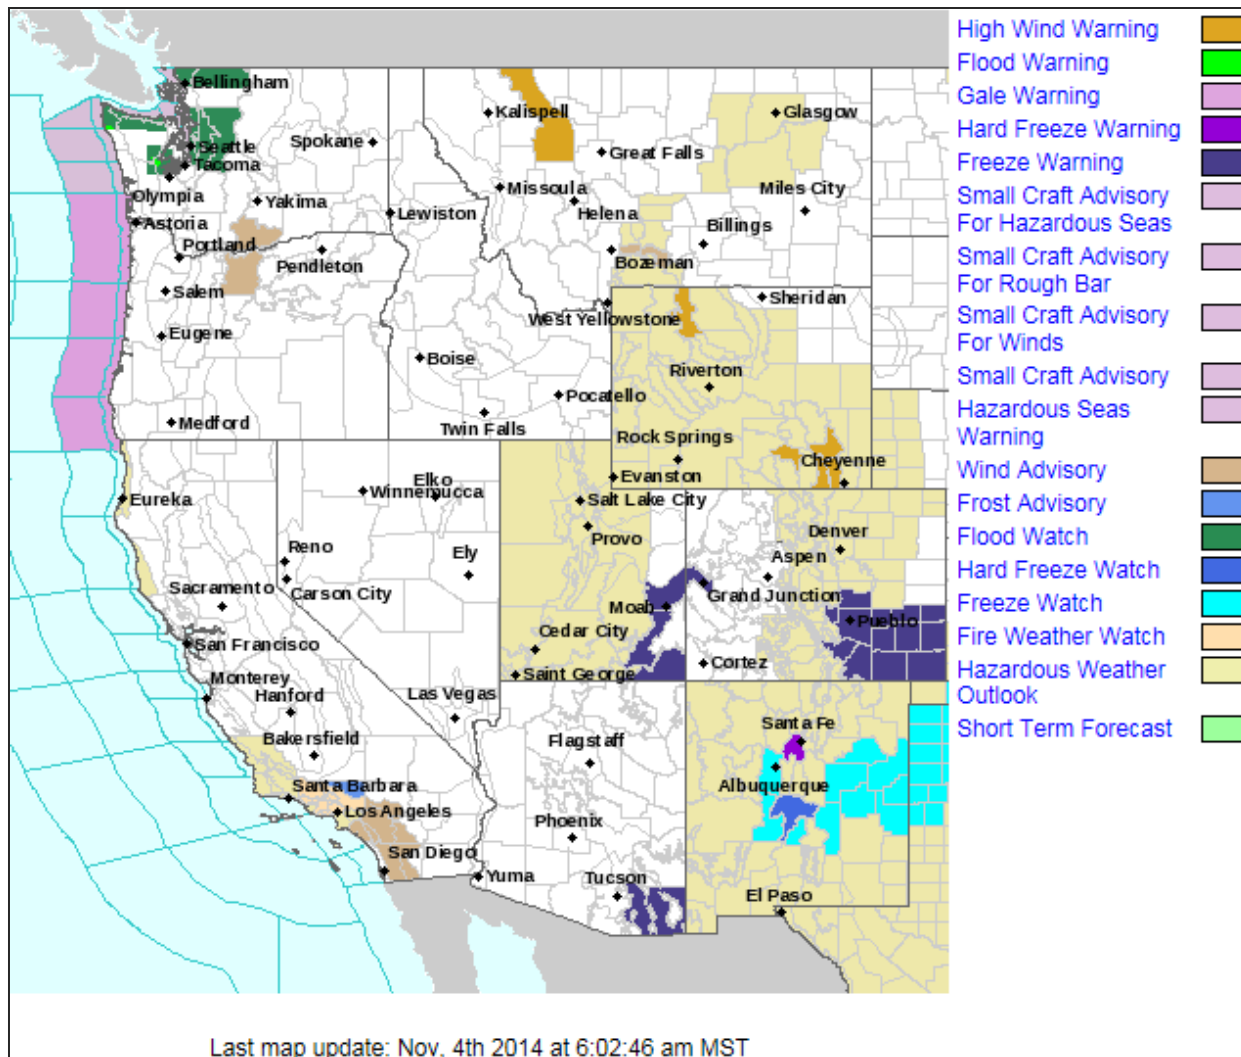

As low pressure exits the region today, strong high pressure will push in from the west. This will result in a warming trend through the rest of the work week under clear skies. High temperatures will be well above normal by the end of the week with highs reaching into the mid to upper 80s at most lower desert locations. These warm and dry conditions are expected to last into next week.
